

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Canadian startup launches law search engine

Legal technology puts 5 million pages of laws from around the world

(September 24, 2015, Toronto) – Canadian startup, Global-Regulation Inc., has just launched a law search engine that enables searching 225,000+ laws from the European Union, United States, Canada, China, Philippines, Sri Lanka, Ireland, Germany, Japan and other countries.

“Our software automatically translates laws into English so our users can search the world’s laws,” says Founder Addison Cameron-Huff. “Automatic translation makes the world’s laws instantly accessible to researchers, regulators, lawyers and businesspeople.”

Global-Regulation emerged out of research at Osgoode School of Law (York University) in Toronto, Canada. The two Founders are Nachshon Goltz, an Israeli lawyer turned Ph.D. candidate at Osgoode Law School and Addison Cameron-Huff, a Canadian tech lawyer and award-winning programmer. Mr. Goltz, who is completing his Ph.D. in regulation, knows that, “Google does not cater to government regulators.”

Global-Regulation Co-founders Goltz and Cameron-Huff

“We are helping the people who write our laws by giving them the tools they know they need but no one is making,” notes Mr. Cameron-Huff.

The founders aim to make the world’s laws searchable in order to help regulators make better regulations and lawyers better understand the international landscape.

Global-Regulation has 100,000 more laws in the pipeline and aim to have more than half a million laws available in 2016. The current database would exceed 5 million printed pages and would be a stack as high as the CN Tower.

The service is available for limited free use by the public at www.global-regulation.com.

-30-

For more information, or to schedule interviews, please contact:

Michael Zupanic, ECO Strategy
mzupanic@ecostrategy.ca or 416-972-7401

Background Information on Global-Regulation Inc.

Global-Regulation Inc. is a software company based out of Toronto, Canada based on academic research at Osgoode Hall Law School, York University, Canada. The founders are two lawyers: one trained in Canada the other in Israel. Mr. Cameron-Huff brings a decade of software development work to the venture and Mr. Goltz is completing his Ph.D in regulation and law. Early users of global-regulation.com include universities in the United States and two levels of the Canadian government.